

Training for Clinical Supervision Providers (QCS) MPCC-S

Below is a list of possible options for getting the required Clinical Supervision Training to become a RQS. This is not an exhaustive list, but we hope that it is helpful to you as you research possible clinical supervision training opportunities.

- Supervisor Training for Registered Psychotherapists (Ontario) - Through the process of supervised practice, psychotherapists learn and hone their skills, deepen their understanding of themselves and their clients, and embrace their personal style of psychotherapy. The supervisor is there to teach, guide, protect, encourage, and correct, allowing the supervisee to develop from a beginner into an independent and competent psychotherapist. This is true also for those situations when experienced therapists seek supervision, be it for additional learning, to expand their practice, or because of a mandate from their association or regulator. Supervision is, therefore, a vital part of the training of psychotherapists and of keeping clients and the profession as a whole safe. This part-time course, running for 15 two-hour sessions, covers all essential topics that need to be understood by those who want to add supervision of RPs to their practice skills. Small group sizes guarantee an in-depth and personal learning experience. Experiential aspects and in-class sessions offer a practical perspective. <https://livingbridge.ca/ce/supervisor-training-program-for-rps>
- UNC Greensboro: Approved Clinical Supervisor Training - The 45-hour program meets all of the content requirements (topics) for a practicing counselor to become an Approved Clinical Supervisor, a credential offered through the Center of Credentialing and Education. The training can also serve as a convenient way to achieve contact hours.
